

1. Discuss the questions.

- What are some tips for a good presentation?
- What are some effective ways to start a presentation?
- How do we structure a presentation?

2. Match the halves to make phrases.

- | | |
|----------------|---------------------------------|
| a) start | 1) in on the statistics |
| b) bring | 2) in with the next information |
| c) give | 3) up to date on the topic |
| d) fill | 4) away a bit |
| e) kick | 5) off by discussing |
| f) tie | 6) on this point |
| g) move | 7) by saying a few words |
| h) get carried | 8) for time |
| i) be pushed | 9) a full breakdown of data |
| j) expand | 10) on to the next point |

3. Read the phrases and decide if they might appear in the introduction, the main part or the conclusion of a presentation.

- a) My goal is to give you a full breakdown of the statistics in this area.
- b) In a nutshell, this idea is worth a shot.
- c) So, I'll begin by filling you in on the background to the story. And then, I'll go on to highlight what I see as the main points of this topic.
- d) Let me just run through the main takeaway again.
- e) Since we are pushed for time, let's move on to the results.
- f) Let me start by saying just a few words about my own background.
- g) Well, this brings me to the end of my presentation.
- h) Sorry, I got carried away a little.

4. Read the excerpts from a presentation and put them in the correct order.

Discuss how each of them could be improved.

- a) That's why today we are going to talk about cross-cultural communication.
Let's kick off by discussing some cultural biases that we are all familiar with.
- b) This ties in with my last point – disagreeing productively. We have to keep in mind that when it comes to disagreement, what works nicely in one culture may be inappropriate in another. But with a little of effort and creativity you may learn something from opposing views and keep the relationships. So that's the end of my presentation. Do you have any questions?
- c) Let's move on to my next point which is feedback. Here we should keep in mind that people can be upgraders or downgraders when criticizing someone or something. Understanding the difference should help us to receive and interpret any feedback.
- d) Let's start our presentation. My name is Julia and I'm a communication coach at ABC company. I have majored both in psychology and international relations. Through years of working with people around the world, I've got a good grasp of people's communication styles and defined main approaches to successful communication.
- e) But that's not the topic of our presentation today. As I was saying, whether we want it or not, we are often misguided by our own perception and stereotypes. Especially, when it happens to be an awkward or stressful moment.

5. Prepare a mini presentation based on the information you receive. Think of an effective start and use phrases from ex. 2 and ex. 3 to structure your presentation.6. Prepare a mini presentation based on the task you receive. Make sure to structure your presentation correctly and use the phrases from ex. 2 and ex. 3 for signposting.